The Spectrum Of Art

The value of art consist some ideologies given by many artist and famous philosophers .

The term philosophy contains the thoughts of renowned personalities on various topic like society, politics, democracy, life, responsibility, art, beauty, nature etc.

Socrates was the first western philosopher of 12th century. Though we do not have any written description of his views. Lots of thinkers joined this field and enriched the aura of art by their enlightening ideas.

Many philosophers have laid the concept of sincerity in Art. Artist should not imitate others work. Artists should be free to present their individual touch . So that they can give a new direction to art. Exposure should be given to their own identity so that they can express themselves. Plato was a great thinker who propounded that all the artists do imitation and original beauty is created by God only. An artist cannot portray the freshness of morning and the heart touching fragrance of the flowers in his creations.

The moral values are the most important trait of civilization. Art always shows the glimpse of society. An artistic work must impart the tenets of morality. One should focus on morality to promote the cultural value of his country. There should be a touch of religion in Art. Our Dharma saves us from immorality and anarchy .It teaches us what is right and what is wrong .

Art should not be create for a special group of society but it must be for all . An art work should be taken as art and nothing else. It must not arouse wicked feelings in a person's heart. A work of art must be an inspiration for the coming generations. In this way art will find its real subsistence .

Art should be comprehensive. An artist should express his/her ideas and creativity in a very unique and simple manner so that it could reach to everyone. A complex work of art creates negativity and disturbs the observer mentally.

Art always shows the progress of culture . In other words we can say that art is the mirror of society. In this way an artist plays a very important role in shaping his age.

Art is a very powerful expression of human thinking so it is dangerous also. All of the arts move people powerfully . They can strongly influence our behaviour and even our character .

It is surely a challenge for an artist to enable free, honest, challenging communication with people through his art pieces while resisting the unreasoned power of advertising imagery and media hype.

According to the eminent thinkers and philosophers Plato, Hegel, Nietzsche, Tolstoy etc., " A great future can be imagined out of these valuable suggestions."

There is a need to protect the dignity of our society and culture. The field of art has strong contribution in reformation. There is no restrictions for revealing the feelings in art but always be alert for the reputation of our society and culture.

The values of art shows our mentality and nature.

An artist must impart his talent through his artistic innovations. An object of art circulates its beauty even if the maker leaves this world. Perhaps this is the reason why an art piece is considered to have an everlasting impression.
