BETWEEN DEADLINES AND DIYAS: THE UNSEEN LABOUR OF WORKING WOMEN DURING FESTIVALS

"THE HANDS THAT LIGHT THE DIYAS DESERVE A MOMENT TO ENJOY THEIR GLOW, TOO."

Festivals in India bring joy, warmth, light, and togetherness. As Diwali approaches, homes sparkle with decorations, the fragrance of sweets fills the air, and rangolis brighten doorsteps. Yet, behind this festive charm lies an often-overlooked story—the unseen labour of working women who strive to balance professional commitments with the expectations of celebration.

For many women, the festive season means more work, not less. Office meetings, deadlines, classes, and professional responsibilities continue, while cleaning, shopping, cooking, decorating, and organising family gatherings add to their workload. After a demanding day at work, many return home only to begin their second shift, often sacrificing their much-needed rest.

The question is not whether working women can manage both worlds, but why they are expected to carry so much of the burden alone.

This is the reality of unseen labour—the planning, organising, and countless little tasks that make festivals memorable but seldom receive recognition. As the saying goes, "घर की रौनक के पीछे, किसी की मेहनत भी होती है।"

A meaningful change can begin at the workplace. During major festivals, organisations can offer flexible working hours, reduce non-essential meetings, set realistic deadlines, and avoid unnecessary after-hours work. Work-from-home options, wherever feasible, can also provide some relief. Small gestures of flexibility can make a significant difference, allowing employees to celebrate without feeling stretched between competing responsibilities.

At home, too, festive preparations should be a shared responsibility, not a woman's duty alone. Partners, children, and other family members can contribute to cooking, cleaning, shopping, and decorating. After all, a festival becomes truly joyful when the work behind it is shared by everyone.

Working women need more than appreciation; they need understanding, cooperation, and the freedom to celebrate without exhaustion. Their contribution deserves recognition not merely through kind words, but through practical support at work and at home.

This festive season, let us look beyond the glitter of decorations and acknowledge the hands that create it. The woman who meets office deadlines and lights the diyas deserves the time to sit back and enjoy their radiance, too. Because the true spirit of a festival lies not merely in the lamps we light, but in the equality, care, and happiness we share.

"दीयों की लौ में सबका संसार सजे,
हर आँगन में खुशियों के फूल खिलें।
जो औरों के लिए हर पल उजियारा करे,
उस नारी के जीवन में भी सुकून के दीप जलें"

WHY INDIA'S YOUTH NEED TO BE NATIONALIST

Why they need to preserve India's ancient culture and be proud of the glorious heritage that India has

We live in an era where the world fits into our smart phones. For a young Indian today, it is easier than ever to adopt global trends, listen to international music, and dream of a life in a foreign city. While being a global citizen is great, in this fast-paced race to modernize, we are slowly losing our grip on something deeply important: our own identity. For the youth of India, developing a strong sense of nationalism and preserving our ancient culture is no longer just an option; it is a necessity.

Nationalism is often misunderstood as just waving a flag on Independence Day. In reality, it is a deep, emotional connection to your roots. India has the largest youth population in the world. If this generation does not feel a sense of belonging and duty toward the nation, who will build its future? Nationalism gives young people a reason to stay, innovate, and solve local problems rather than taking their talents abroad. It creates a mindset where building the country becomes a personal goal, not just the government's job.

To feel this connection, the youth must look back at India's glorious heritage. We are not just a developing economy; we are one of the oldest, most advanced civilizations in human history. Long before the modern world discovered science and medicine, our ancestors were pioneers. From the concept of zero and the decimal system to the medical science of Ayurveda and the architectural miracles of ancient temples, India's contributions to human progress are unmatched.

Being proud of this heritage is not about living in the past. It is about self-belief. When young Indians realize that they carry the DNA of scholars, astronomers, and philosophers who mapped the stars and wrote the Vedas, they gain the confidence to lead the world today. It reminds them that innovation and brilliance are already in their blood.

Equally important is the preservation of our ancient culture. Indian culture is not just about wearing traditional clothes during Diwali or eating regional food. It is a complete way of life. It teaches us Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam—the world is one family. It teaches us sustainability, respecting nature, and finding balance. Today's youth face unprecedented levels of stress, anxiety, and isolation. The solutions to many of these modern struggles lie in our ancient practices, like Yoga and meditation, which the rest of the world is now eagerly adopting. If we do not value and preserve these traditions, they will fade away, or worse, they will be repackaged and sold back to us by the West.

You can speak fluent English, work in a top multinational company, and travel the globe, but your ultimate strength comes from your roots. A tree without deep roots will inevitably fall when a strong storm hits. For the youth of today, India's ancient culture and nationalist pride are those roots. We must carry our heritage not as a burden of the past, but as our greatest badge of honor for the future.

ख़्वाब-ए-रंग

ढलते ही रात जाने कितने ख्वाब टूटते हैं,
पर रंग उनके दिल से कभी ना छूटते हैं।

ये रात ढल रही है संग ख्वाब ढल रहे हैं.
पर दिल में सोए अरमाँ आँखों को मल रहे हैं।

हाथों की ये लकीरें, ना रोज़ देखिए अब
तकदीर के सितारे, हम सबको छल रहे हैं।

नहीं मिलता वो जहाँ में, जिसे मन किसी का चाहे
अनचाहे लोग लेकिन, संग उसके चल रहे हैं।

नहीं हमसफर जरूरी, मुझे राहे जिंदगी में,
क्यूँ थाम मेरा दामन, सब मुझको तक रहे हैं।

"ए गीत" रौनकों में जो साथ थे हमारे
वही साथी गर्दिशों में अब रंग बदल रहे हैं।

उट्ठे ना हूक दिल में, ना दर्द की खलिश हो
दरिया ए इश्क में वो, इन सब से डर रहे हैं|

क्यों लोग मेरी जानिब, लगे उँगलियाँ उठाने,
नीयत-उन्हीं की हम जो, उन ही से कह रहे हैं।

तन्हाइयाँ मुझे तो अपनी सी लग रही हैं
जहाँ ख्वाब मेरे सारे संग मेरे हँस रहे हैं।
